2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: the examiner agrees with the applicant that the claims as currently drawn are novel and non-obvious.
3. Claims 32, 48, and 55 are drawn to a method and system of utilizing personal user lists to forward information, wherein paging information including a plurality of names and associated paging numbers and call back numbers is utilized as part of a paging system and sent to client devices. These are not to be confused with member messages (P. 15, Para. 1), nor of caller-ID/caller Internet information (P. 15, Para. 4). These limitations, when in combination with the previously presented limitations, are not taught or suggested in the known art, and are therefore novel and non-obvious.

These are not to be confused with member messages (P. 15, Para. 1), nor of caller-ID/caller Internet information (P. 15, Para. 4). These limitations, when in combination with the previously presented limitations, are not taught or suggested in the known art, and are therefore novel and non-obvious.
